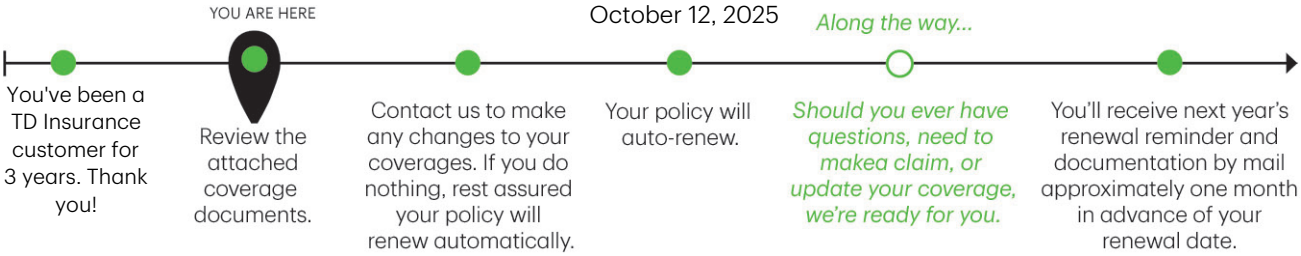
Your insurance journey



Updates to your premium

The increased cost of repairs and increased occurrence of severe weather and natural disasters in Ontario have affected your premium. Due to inflation, the cost of building materials has increased, meaning that the cost to repair and rebuild your home in the event of a claim has increased. Significant weather events such as ice storms, high winds, and heavy rainfall, as well as the increase in frequency and severity of natural disasters such as fires and floods have affected the cost of home insurance in Ontario.

Visit us online or go to the Insurance Bureau of Canada at ibc.ca for tips on protecting your home from the most common types of damage. We also invite you to call and speak to one of our advisors and learn ways to save on your insurance.

Upcoming changes to your Condominium Insurance

Thank you for trusting us with your insurance needs, we are committed to keeping you informed about matters that affect your insurance.

We wanted to let you know about some important updates to your condo insurance that will take place on your renewal. To align your coverage to your individual needs, we're updating how your Fair Rental Value coverage limit(s) are calculated.

How your new limit is calculated

Your new limits for Fair Rental Value will be added with an effective date of 2025-10-12 for the location(s) listed below:

28 Freeland ST SUITE 2003, Toronto ON M5E 0E3

Previously, Fair Rental Value coverage used to be part of your condo global limit amount. Your new limit will now be a separate amount calculated based on the highest average rental price in your province for up to 18 months of rental replacement.

What you need to do

We want to ensure you understand your new coverage limits and they continue to meet your needs. We kindly ask you to:

- Refer to your coverage summary page included in this package. Please review your coverage limits to ensure they continue to make sense for you.
- Review the amount you are charging for rent to ensure that your new limit and the duration of months that you will require the coverage for is appropriate. If you require changes to these limits based on your needs then please contact us to discuss your personalized options.

What is Fair Rental Value coverage?

This is the amount of rent you will lose if the condominium unit that you rent to others in whole or in part is damaged by a covered incident and your tenant must leave the location while repairs occur.

Upcoming changes: limited water damage coverage caused by water heater tanks

As water heater tanks age, the potential for water damage claims increases and resulting damages can be significant in the event of a loss. To help reduce water damage losses from older tanks, a limitation will be applied on your next renewal. You'll continue to receive the same coverage for your water heater tank until it is 15 years or older.

Read more on when this limitation applies, how you can identify the age of your water heater and steps to maintain coverage.

Water heater tank coverage age limitation

Damage caused by water heater tanks will continue to be covered for the first 14 years, however, regardless of the age of your water heater tank you'll see an exclusion applied upon your next renewal.

An exclusion will apply to tanks that were manufactured 15 or more years ago - water damage will not be covered if there is a loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by the escape or leakage of water originating from the water heater tank(s) located at the address(es) above.

One year grace period for water heater tanks currently 15 years or older

To provide early awareness to our valued customers of the upcoming exclusion and the opportunity to take preventative measures, you'll keep your current coverage if your water heater tank is currently 15 years or older. At your next year's renewal, the exclusion will apply.

Tankless heaters are not excluded.

All policies will have this exclusion included, so even if you do not have a water heater tank, you'll still notice the endorsement included at your next renewal.

Preventative steps you can take today

Helpful steps for preparation and prevention:

1. Identify the age of your water heater tank. The manufacture date is located on a placard attached to your tank or in some instances reference the tank's serial number to look up the age on the manufacturer's website.
2. Take a picture and save it for future reference. In the event of a claim, we'll likely request details of the tank, taking a picture of the placard or serial number or documenting these details now can help ease the process. The bill of sale or installation paperwork are other ways to ensure these details are readily available.
3. Consider replacing your tank early. With time, water heater tanks can leak, develop faulty heating elements, or experience rust or corrosion. Based on our industry research, typically, these signs begin when the tank is 10 or 11 years old, which is the average life expectancy. We recommend an early replacement to avoid costly damage and help prevent the exclusion from applying at the time of a claim. If you have rented water tank, consider speaking with your service provider on replacement options.
